All up between the Washita River and the Cheyenne and Arapaho country, but they all originate together.

(The Caddo, Wichita, and Deleware?)

Yeah. They all mixed now. They all in that same land. And that's where you find those people - living there. That's where they live. And they've lived there for many years. They been here across over there before our tribe came in. We came after them, after that. See, these Wichita Mountains, they call Wichita Mountains - - the Wichitas live there and originate up there. Since they been driven from Georgia and all back in eastern country, they move this way and they originate over there in the Wichita Mountains. That's why they call it Wichita Mountains - under Wichita tribe. The Kiowas, Comanches, and Kiowa-Apaches, they drove them out of there, they run them out. Tribe run them out and then back this way. And then they run over there and kill a lot of them out and that's why they ain't very many in the tribes. There very few in those tribes, very few. Caddos are very few, and the Wichitas are very few, and the Delewares are very few - very few in the tribes. I guess about the biggest tribe today we have in Caddo County, Kiowa County and Comanche County is the Kiowas and Comanches. They pretty well numbered, way up there. Us Apaches are not too many - they ain't too many. They kill out a lot of us, lot of us. Made our tribe pretty small. So that's the way our tribes of Indians are standing today.

(I wanted to ask you too, about why there are two Blackfoot Societies and not just one?)

Well, I'll tell you what. Just like I told you here awhile back about that story before. You know how those two big chiefs fought over a cow bag. And one of the tribes got mad and moved away on account of that cow bag - couldn't get his part. The other chief got all of it and he didn't get his part. So they got mad and took his bunch out and moved away from this other tribe. So that's
