Irish potatoes on it. And so it made a fair living, I don't mean riches, but somehow or another their people were connected with the I don't know, Royal family or what, but anyway they drawed this little income, it was a little in ome, come along with th s. Well, if he adopted me I could be his heir, and I could go over there and take that. Otherwise, he had a cousin with the same name as his that did take it. Well, my brother-in-law wanted to adopted me, but my sis said, she put her big foot in, so that put that out. So I met this kid in a --I mean jumped out of the fire, I mean out of the frying pan into the fire. But, I did try to make a go of it, you know, I tried to, you know to make--finally after three little boys, you know, I just -- and then I came back to Oklhoma and I came back to Oklahoma before that, but what I mean you know, I finally came back here and I've been here more or less ever since. That's been thrity years ago.

STREET CARS:

(Well, you said you never seen a street-car before, where was this?)

Oh, it was down in Ft.Worth--I had never see it--see I've been around Oklahoma City, but we never did go down into Oklahoma City. You know Oklahoma City had street cars too. See, you kn ow, I never did go down in it. When we go by, we come through on train, well you know we never saw anything even it seemed like it was night-time.

MORE ABOUT INDIANS:

Or my daddy would make a trip over at grandmas, you know, on a wagon--he'd go out around, see from Drumright over to Binger. And he never would go through, he was like me, he didn't like big cities. Now, my mother, she kinda liked the city. But she was afraid of the wilderness, you know, she hear all these tales, you know, back then they were newer and closer to her than they are to us see and course she'd seen fact is she and my grandmother at one time, I don't remember where she said this was, I don't know where it was on the edge of Missouri or it was here in Oklahoma, but anyway a bunch of drunken Indians and there was some whites mixed in with 'em. And they came in on a family and they scalped 'em. And mly grandma and my mama was just a little bitty girl. You know, she was just a little kid. And mama and grandma and them sewed those peoplces scalps back on.

(They did?)
