would be a lot. But occupied by oh 10-15 acres . Whatever it was. East of that creek there'll be another area. I think I said other lots. But all and all I'd say it's about 40 acres. That's what they call lots. Anyway we didn't get no - oh a very few got 460 acres. It seem like - across down here on this side of the river - these Indians got 460 acres on the flat. Well they said, well my daughter is takin' her 160 acres in the jacks. Good level land so we won't have to worry about our wood. We can always get our wood from her place, or our son or somethin' like that. So they got their 460 acre tracts right there near the edge of the river. Just this side of the river, north of town. Those instances over there are few where they got down to 460 acres. And that's all. They made the best choice. And they're better situated than a lot of those that got divided into quarters. Coures that ought to be good wheat land.

(Well your folks, were their allotments divided up, then?)

Oh, yeah, yeah. My folks. My allotment - my 80 acres, and my dad's and my mother's, and their grandboy west of me (Unintelligible)

(Now where is your allotment, your folks' allotment?)

Well, I sold my land. My land was all alkali land. Couldn't get no grass to grow. I sold it. It's due north of here across the river, about six miles. But of course, I got other land.

(Did you have a 160 acres?)

160 acres. Split.

(But was it split up?)

Yeah, split up.

(Well did your folks select your allotment for you?)

Yeah. I was about 8 years old, they selected the land. They selected mine. My Dad's - put me alongside him.
