Indian money. It was a boys and girls too. I heard some say that in 1903 there was about 125 of us - boys and girls - were in dormitories. After that they moved the girls over to another place. I guess the boys weren't studying???

(That a - that oldest building there, I guess where the boys and girls were together - that's what they call Grand Jackson.)

Oh, I don't know if it had another name.

(It's that the red brick one.)

This one was just an old frame building.

(An old frame building?)

Now, the school, what we call the college, was right north of the dormitory building - and it was a brick building.

(That's the Grand Jackson one.)

I don't whether it is still standing or not. We went there one time we drove around there - of course Durant had grown so much in that length of time - I was kinsa lost out there. We never did find it - we just drove out there someday. We drove out there second time to try to find it we went to bottom of it, but couldn't find it anymore.

(I went to O.B.C. from 1937 to 1940; but by that time they didn't have classes out there. Well, Rosey, yesterday, was telling me that she went to O.B.C.)

Yeah, she went there. No - ah- she went to the old ah. . .

Mrs. Oaks: (name not clear) girls were there.

She went there the same time I did. 19. . .ah. . . .

(Rosa did? Ah, huh, well, she told me that she'd been there and I went in 1937 to 40.)

Well, she went to Durant Presbyterian College ah - I believe.

(At that time?)

Uh-huh. Then after that all closed down and they had to O. B. C. - that's where you went.
