you can follow up on that and see certain denomination of churches. They try to quit it but they can't. There's a lot of them do.

CONCERNING A RELATIVE WHO WAS AN ALCOHOLIC

(Well, you were telling me, once, Mr. Ned, about an example in your own family. I thought it was kinda funny. We were discussing alcoholism among the Indian people. You were telling me about one of your inlaws, I believe...)

Yeah. That was about my brother-in-law.

(Funny instances that have happened to him.)

Well anyway, he was a person that was an alcoholic, you might say, and he was about the worst I have ever seen. I guess that man had drank everything in the world that had had alcohol in it and lots of things that didn't have.

(You mean by that, even hair tonic?)

Oh. Yeah.

(Rubbin' alcohol?)

Drank rubbin' alcohol, and this shavin' lotion - they called it "Green Lizard," or extract - lemon extract or vanilla extract. (laughter.)

(Oh, He'd drink that then.)

Yeah. Or anything that - beer, whiskey - but this brother -in-law of mine, he was far enought along he didn't care what it was just so he'd have alcohol in him. Whenever he got so far along it didn't matter what it was, anything that was liquid that thought might help him get drunk or change his feelings, or whatever kind of effect that they have wenever they want a drink. Well he'd even drink pepper sauce, such as that, milk of magnesia. (laughter.)

(What's the funniest thing her ever drank?)

Well, I'll get to that part of it. And it didn't matter where he went - I don't care if it was strange country where he went, so - I think way down
