sheets and they wouldn't let them call the doctor. Let her stay there unconscious. Stayed all night. One testimony--Wayne Harrington--I heard his testimony--he looked in on her the next morning. She was still breathing, but still lying on the floor. And the blood had dried on her. And he testified that these boys had beaten her and they forced him to assist. He said "I didn't do very much, but I put my foot on her just like as if I was stepping on her--on her chest. And she was unconscious she didn't know what was going on." And they just let her stay there. And the next morning this girl's relative, Linda, came looking for her and they got her to Clinton and they X-rayed her and she had three blood clots, and her skull was crushed in a couple of places, and so the girl died. And there's no question--according to testimony--but it hasn't been proved--that they did beat her. And I talked to Tommy the other day. He wanted me to come in and do something for his little three year old boy. He was concerned about him. The wife had eventually picked him up--just pass him around like a piece of property--you take him a week and you take him a week and she took him and he didn't like the idea and he wanted me to get something done about turning him over to welfare on a temporary basis. I said, "Tommy, did the circumstances have anything to do with what you did--this girl being married to Webster and then Webster marrying your wife? Is there any connection there?" He said, "No, there's no connection." So I don't know. And the boys are concerned. I think they think they're going to go to the penn also. Now one is an ex-convict. And this one--older one--is the one that took this little fourteen year old girl--did I tell you about that? And had intercourse with her right there on the sidewalk on main street in daylight in front of an audience?

Bob: No. It's statutory rape, anyway you look at it. And he's twenty-six years old. And I told her--Jess was with me--I talked to her and Cinda on the way back, and I said "Now you better tell your matron to give you a pregnancy
