

The Ree scouts say that the Dakotas left a signal on their trail. This signal was a pile of stones. On one side was a buffalo bull's skull with its nose toward the stones. On the other side of the pile of stones was a buffalo cow's skull with its nose against the stones. A stick was stuck in the ground beside the nose of the buffalo bull's skull. This stick leaned against the pile of stones. What did this signal mean? Maybe One Bull or some other old man can tell you.
