

Mr. Good Neighbor said "Kola, last night I could not sleep -- something was in my mind. I finally went into a sound slumber and had a very good dream. I dreamed you gave me that new lumber wagon with that new set of double harness. I got up and have come over to see if my good dream would come true."

Shinzy replied, "The wagon and harness are yours, take them home with you." Mr. Good Neighbor spared no time, took them and became the proud owner of a brand new lumber wagon and a set of work harness.

The next day Mr. Good Neighbor invited his Indian neighbor, Shinzy to dinner. After the meal was over they both sat round together smoking when Mr. Good Neighbor said, "Kola, you and I have been good to each and we have been good neighbors and friends but from henceforth, let us not have any more of those good dreams." Shinzy replied, "How!" They shook hands over it and Shinzy went his way.

Blue Thunder, aged 64, was a noted Indian batchelor, until he had met Rocky Butte. Now Rocky Butte, aged 70, became a strong Christian. Blue Thunder spend quite many moons wooing her. Finally she consented to marry him provided he became a Christian and procures a license and marry in the lawful way in the Church. Blue Thunder was willing to do this. So having obtained the license from the Indian Agent he gave himself up to the priest to be baptized and any other Christian ceremony necessary.

At the appointed time, one bright Sunday morning, in the presence of a large congregation, they both marched up to the altar and the priest said "Blue Thunder will you take this woman for your lawful wife? to which he answered "That's what she said." The minister then asked "Rocky Butte will you take this Blue Thunder for your lawful husband?" to which she answered "He surely had the hardest time trying to win me. He said he'll talk himself to death if I don't marry him."
