Yes, the killing of Sitting Bull from the stand point of the Indian, was much of a murder, and it was a bitter thing to be killed by the two Indian Pelice Red Temahawk and Bull head, on December 15th.1890, and at his ewn home.

The Indian Pelice were however wenderfully faithful in carrying out their orders, they but obeyed orders, I organized the original Mounted Pelice of the Indian Service in 1879, and it inaugurated the breaking up of the authority of the Chiefs and the Tribal System.

I have always been of the opinion that I could have controlled these Indians during that craze without treeps.

Ask the Northern Sieux where I was known as Ta Sunks Witke Kela (the friend of Crazy Horse) or the Southern Sieux where I was know as Little Beard, also as Wasicu Wakan, (the white miracle man) I mean the few survivers of that day, and they will tell you the same.

I inclose a copy of a letter bearing on the Ghest Dance which may be interesting to you, which you can read and return at your leisure.

My remarks are not confidential, and you can make any use you wish of them,

I have always been on the side of the Indian, although at times in handling them I have been at times apparently pretty severe. I have always sought to acquire the ability of putting myself in the other fellows place, and getting his point of view,

Talking of Buffale Bill, we were all rather convivial in these days, the story goes that when the Ghest Dance was going full blast on the frontie there was a little banquet on in Chicage, at which were present Gen. Miles, and Buffale Bill, they were both warmed up, and the question was what to do with Sitting Bull, and it was suggested to send Bill after him, to which Bill agreed, so the General wrote out on one of his cards and order for Sitting Bulls arrost, and Bill struck out for the reservation on the first train, next morning it became public and there was much excitement, but they managed to head Bill off at Saint Paul, and saved him from getting kills
