Dear Sir:

I am informed that you receive communications from the Spirit World. The Rev. William Morgan, who met you in Brittany at Rotheneuf some time ago, tells me that he understands that you have received communications from the spirit of a Red Indian chief named Sitting Bull.

I happen to have spent the past three years working upon a biography of this famous Indian, the book is in its last stages. I should be very happy if you could tell me anything you may have learned about the man from your contact with his spirit, whether in the nature of facts of his life, or traits of his character.

Of course the name Sitting Bull was a fairly common one, but the one I am interested in was chief of the Sioux, a member of the Hunkpapa sub-tribe, and the most celebrated American Indian known to history.

Is it possible to question such a spirit about his own life on earth? I shall be very happy to hear from you.

I may say that I am an American, was formerly at Oxford University, and my contact with the Sioux has made me keenly aware of their spiritual capacities. Sitting Bull, for example, was notable for second-sight and prophetic powers.

I trust you will let me hear from you on this matter.

Yours sincerely,

W.S. CAMPBELL
