

I wish you would ask some old men to tell you the stories of Sitting Bull's brave deeds. The four bravest deeds of Sitting Bull. Just when and where they happened, who was there, and what Sitting Bull did. If they can remember, I would like to know what kind of horse he rode, how he was armed, and what clothing and paint he had on. Everything about it. If you will do this, I will promise to send you a copy of the first edition of my book on Sitting Bull, when it comes out.

see page (1) for account of one brave deed.

Sitting Bull had many horses for different occasions. usually he rode a saddle on all his combats. the battle account on page 1 was fought on foot. The killing of the two crows was on horseback.

The first bravest deed of S. B. was when a party of Sioux (12) were attacked by Assiniboine Indians (Hoke) South eastern Montana, perhaps about 70 years ago. S. B. was a young warrior then. S. B. told the rest of the warriors to hold back and riding his horse among the Assiniboines (about 8 or 10 in number) and Tomahawked the leader. This was considered a very brave act since that he was the youngest of the war party. Verified by Two Shield (living) on all the Sioux war parties the battle cry was "We are Sitting Bull's boys." translation "Tatanke-iyo-tonke takokcila."
