

The hair was attached to buffalo skin beadwork three inches in circumference - I also bought a grizzly bear claw necklace, belonging to Sitting Bull himself - When visiting Sheriff Colin Inkster of Winnipeg last summer, I saw this necklace above his curio department room at "Seven Oaks St John's W'p'g - The exsheriff, who is now aged, passed the remark to me at the time, in the presence of his two amiable daughters, "I told my daughters" "to give you back the necklace after I die" - No replied the young lady I intend to keep it! Sure I said "When I give a friend a gift I give it for all time"! I also bought a caverly grey horse from Sitting Bull, belonging to the United States army he had four numerical units branded into his front foot - doubtless taken at the time of the Massacre. - The same afternoon after I bought the horse, I put him amongst our other horses into the Hudsons Bay Companys park at Fort Qu'Appelle our park having been bounded with wooden rails and the Qu'Appelle River itself answering as a boundary division from the opposite North West Mounted Police Park - I was amused to see the caverly grey horse on hearing the bugle feed call, prick his ears, and swim across the river, and gallop up to the N. W. M. Police barracks, tail cocked up, rest assured he got his portion of oats, every time! I was informed later, that the American bugle feed call is the same as the Canadian Call! - I also purchased a gold hunting case watch from the Sitting Bull sioux, with the inscription of the owners name - This watch we returned to the owners family - I forget the name, but I think it was a Captain Williams of the U. S. Army - however I am not certain - They also had a few american coins -
