January 14, 1929.

Major George P. Ahern,
The Woodley,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Major Ahern:

I am afraid you will think my letters tread on each others' heels for I am writing you again before I have had time to get your reply to my last. The fact is that unforeseen circumstances will make it impossible for me to visit Washington this month and so I shall be compelled to miss the annual dinner of the Order of Indian Wars to which I looked forward with such pleasure. However, I shall hope to see you in the Spring when I come to Washington for research. Just now I am busily engaged with one of my Dakota informants whom I have invited down here.

Cordially yours,

W. S. CAMPBELL.