

the bottom, for his boy scout troop. I told him about your "Sitting Bull". He came and got the book as soon as I had finished it and had it transferred to his library card. While he was reading it, I told Mr. Lawther, the 44 man about it. He immediately asked me to tell Phil not to return it to the library, but to bring it to him when he had finished it. Mr. Lawther has it now.

Phil enjoyed the book as much as I did. He is in high school and at that place where he occasionally has to give a book review in his English class.

I suggested that "Sitting Bull" would be a good book to review. He agreed but said that it would be impossible because that book was not in the "required reading"!

Both Phil and I enjoy your easy narrative style. I hope you will do something more in the same manner. Why not Brigham Young?

Yours truly,
Jos. Phelan
