Dear Savoie:

I visited Indian City Saturday on the way to visiting Fort Sill, which I had not seen since I trained there in the First War Class at the School of Fire in the fall of 1917.

At Indian City there is a curio shop where I found a number of books about Indians on sale. The manager and corcessionaire is Charles F. Goodwin, and his secretary is Ruth Cox. They told me that they had begun with Oliver La Farge's book on Indians recently published, and had sold almost a dozen copies. They were interested when I suggested that you might send down copies of my SITTING BULL for display and sale, and seemed quite cordial to the suggestion. I thought I would pass the word along, as a great many people go through that shop on their way to Indian City. There must have been one hundred tourists in the group I was with, and apparently it is opened the year around.

Cordially yours,

W.S. CAMPBELL
