Of course you could do much better, if you were on the ground. Make each question cover a certain point in a few words. Do not ask complicated questions. Making such a questionnaire is quite a job.

I think five dollars would not be too much for such a service.; you should make ~~it~~ a definite offer.

Remember that a chief had to make so many presents that he was generally poor, and his lodge was often shabbier than those of his followers. Sitting Bull was always careless about appearances, he was not swanky; he relied upon his reputation and his personal qualities to impress his people. You will find a photograph of his tipi when a prisoner of war in my NEW SOURCES.

I hope this helps.

Sincerely
