Dear Stanley Vestal:

Thanks for the compliment, as the boys say, but right now we haven't money for postage. Everything is on the cuff. However, when you come you might bring the drawings along and we can go into the matter. It would be a fine gesture if you'd donate them to us.

I ordered a copy of your new book late in April. I have not had time to read it. I have been alone since March 5, and you know what that means around a three ring circus.

One Bull, wife, son, and a daughter, Mrs. Leo Cadotte, her husband, and her two little sons, were here last Friday. They were en route to the Rosebud. They were also broke and came in to put the touch on me for $1.50 so now I'm broke. I had them go a local photographer for a group picture and a singleton of One Bull. Will show you the results when you come.

Dorothy Warren, the little girl we did not see when we were in Norman last year, is with you again this year. If you should see her, give her my regards.

I'd like to print a review of Mountain Men in our REVIEW but at the moment I can't do it myself. If you know of one that we could secure, let me know.

It isn't bad enough to have do my own typing but I had to nick the tip of my finger with a razor blade, the finger with which I execute all my fancy transpositions.

Let me know a little in advance of your arrival, please.

Cordially yours,

Lawrence K. Fox
