The command oconsisted of troop "F", Eighth Cavalry, Leiutenants S L H Loscum and M F Steele and forty-eight enlisted men; troop "G," Eighth Cavalry, Caot. E G Fechet, Lt.s E H Crowder and E C Brooks and fifty-one enlisted men; Capt. A R Chapin, medical officer, and Jospital Steward August Nickel two Indian scouts Smell-the-Bear and Iron Dog, Louis Primeau, guide and interpreter. The artillery, consisting of one Gatling gun with "G" troop, and one Hotchkiss breach-loading steel fifle, with "F"troop, was under the oimmediate command of Lt, Brooks. Transportation, cone four-horse spring wwagon and one Red Cross ambulanc e.

For the first four miles the squaddon moved at a quick walk. A halt was then made and themen were told to fix their saddles and arms securely, as I intended to make a rapid ride to Oak Creek.

The ride to Oak Creek waas taken ata brisk trot. Two or three sshort halts were made in order to tighten the girths ad to change the troop lexding the column. On reaching the dcreek, atabout 4:30 AM, I was greatly surprised and condcerned to find that the scout whom Bull Head had been directed sto send to meet me at thiat point had not arrived. Although bewildered by this event, I realized that there was but one thing to be done, to push my command to Grand River as rapidly as possible and act according to the situation found. The gallop waas the gait from this time on. I was puushing the animals, but still not too fast to impair pursuit beyond Grna d River should I find that Sitting Bull gad escaped.

Just in the gray of the dawn a mounted man was discovered approaching rapidly. He proved to be one of the police, who reported that all the other police had been killed. I forwarded to Colonel Drum the substance of his report, with the additional statement thet would move in rapidly and endeavor to relications.

any of the police who might be alive. This vourier (Hawkman), by the waym was mounted on theffamous white horse given to Situting Bulla by Buffalo Bill.

The men at once prepared for action by removing and stowng away their ove overcoats and fur gloves. While the were doing this I rode along the line. taking a good look at each men. Their bearing was such as to inspire me witht be the fullest confidence that they would do their duty. The squadron was advancing in two columns, the artilbery between the heads, ready for deployment. The line had just commenced the forward movement when another of the police panner came in and reported that Sitting Bull's poeple had a number of the police penned up in his hosem; that they werre nearly out of amunition nand couldnot hold out much lo nger. At this time we could hearsome firing. In a few minutes we were in position on the highlands overlooking the valley of Grand River, with SB's house, surrounded by the camp of the ghost-dancers, immmediately in front and some twelve hundred yards distant. The firing continued and seemed to be from three different and widely separated points from the housem, from a clump of timber beyond the house, and from a party, apparently forty or fifty, on our right front and some eight or nine hundred yards away. At first there was nothing to indicate the position of the police. Our approach had apparently not been noticed by either party, sointent were they on the business on hand. The pre-arranged signel (a white flag) was displayed, but was not answered. I then ordered Brooks to drop a shell between the house and the folump of timber just beyond. It may be as well to state here that xx the Hotchkiss gun would not have beenup on the line at this time but for the courage and presence
