

steamboats in the spring of 1881. Sitting Bull surrendered to the military at Fort Buford. In his death the Sioux Nation lost a great leader. They are all dead now -- Sitting Bull, Rain-in-the-Face, Crow King, Gall, Crazy Horse, Red Cloud, Flying Cloud, and soon the Great Spirit will call the remaining warriors.

"In this narrative I have not boasted of my conquests. I am a woman, but I fought for my people. The white man will never understand the Indian. Eyas-henala! I have said everything! Nuwe! The end!"
