

1889

③ Finding that the roving, hunter had not, as they had dreamed, eagerly turned into a settled, ^{thrifty} industrious Christian farmer, the his well-wishers reversed themselves. In 1883, they had been horrified at the Commission who had tried to grab the Sioux lands. In 1889 they set out to grab them lands themselves - with the best of intentions, of course - so that the Indian, reduced to a pauper, would have to go to work. ~~But~~ He was to be subjected to grand larceny - for the good of his soul! Brotherly love, good will to men!

Of course many of them living white-brothers were themselves living in idleness on dividends received from property to which they had no better title than the Sioux had to his lands - But who would be so ~~as~~

Many that...
