

Military Collector & Historian, the quarterly journal of The Company of Military Collectors & Historians, Washington, D.C. While I hope that you will like it, I imagine that you have to look at too many examples of bad writing in the course of your work without looking at some more in your free moments. The article was written primarily for specialists and, as space was quite a consideration, I did not go into a lot of detail in describing each part of the equipments, figuring that it would be sufficient in most cases to cite the source where particular details may be found.

Again, thank you for your letters and always grateful for your assistance.

Cordially,

James S. Hutchins
