

Slohan, or Crawler, and old time warrior, lived to be very old man having reached the age of 87 years. When he was not waling he bestroed a buckskin steed.

Blihe, a nephew of Slohan, was curious to know why Slohan always rode a buckskin pony. He asked: "Uncle Slohan, why do you always ride a buckskin pony?" Slohan replied, "Nephew, when I was in that Custer fight, I rode a snow white pony, but being in the thickest of the fight amidst the firing of soldiers guns and cannons, so thick was the smoke caused by the powder that when I came out alive out of the battle field, my white pony was discolored--instead of a white pony I returned riding a buckskin pony."