Office of Indian Affairs

Indian Agencies

April 1, 1947

The Office of Indian Affairs maintains offices throughout the United States to provide those services for which the Federal Government is responsible, to the American Indians. There are offices in Washington, D. C., and ~~Chicago, Illinois~~. The list which follows shows the district offices, the field agencies in each district, the principal land areas within the jurisdiction of each agency, and the main tribes inhabiting each area. These Indian-owned lands, known variously as reservations, communities, colonies, rancherias, pueblos, and the like, are tracts reserved by treaty, agreement, executive order, or statute, to the Indian people, who once owned all of what is now the continental United States.
