

As subjects for notes I would suggest:

- 1) The sign language (The Red Man's Esperanto)
- 2) The Calmek Dance. Have you the Handbook of Am. Indians? (Bul. 30. B. S. E.) If not, I will give you the principal facts if you so desire.
- 3) Happy Hunting Ground. (Same suggestion as for 2), above.
- 4) Have you any ^{reliable} authority for the idea expressed at the end of the last Chapter, that the Ind. avenged murder for the purpose to provide an attendant or companion for the soul of the murdered person? Or is this merely your own idea? In the former case this belief (if it really occurs or occurred among our Indians) would deserve a foot-note because it would make the custom under consideration appear in an entirely different light than is usually the case (namely that Ind. avenged a murder merely for the purpose of taking revenge).

My work on the illustrations has been delayed ^{solely} over decision to use shield - designs for the Chapter - initials, because this requires changes in some of the illustrations. The one for the head of Chap. III has to
