Dear Professor:

If you have been advised by experienced men to let Mr. Brown have the Ms. and illustrations until "next summer" it is probably best to follow that advice, especially since it is clear that he would like to publish the book and will therefore doubtless make efforts to get the money. It may, however be good policy to let him know definitely that the end of next summer would positively be the expiration of the term so far as he is concerned because he might otherwise put the matter off in hopes of getting another chance after that time.

I dont get from his letters the impression that he is much of a business man. Not very energetic nor punctual nor very precise and consistent in his statements. But it may be as well to give him another chance.

Sincerely yours

In haste.

Frederick Weygold
