2 production of documents at trial; the summoning of jurors
3 and the waiver of jury trial; the form and manner of entry
4 of judgments; the manner of executing judgments; the con-
5 duct of supplementary proceedings; the survival of actions
6 and the substitution of parties; the amounts and manner
7 of payment of fees to the clerk or the marshal of the court;
8 the practice of attorneys; and such other matters as may 9 require regulation in order to provide a complete system
10 of procedure for the conduct of the court. In general the 11 rules of court shall conform as nearly as possible to the 12 statutes regulating the procedure in the district courts of 13 the United States, the rules of the Supreme Court governing
14 causes in said district courts, and the practice in the courts
15 of the State in which the controversy arises, save that the 16 rules shall, so far as possible, be nontechnical in character 17 and fitted to the needs of prospective litigants.

18 SEC. 8. The court may provide, by rules to be pro-
19 mulgated by it, for appeals to the full court from judgments
20 rendered on circuit by less than a majority of the full court.

21 SEC. 9. All substantial rights accorded to the accused 22 in criminal prosecutions in the district courts of the United 23 States shall be accorded in prosecutions in the Court of 24 Indian Affairs. The trial of offenses punishable by death 25 or by imprisonment for a period exceeding five years shall
