Aged Scholar Retired.

MOODY, March 7 (Special)—The Rev. Lewis Beamer, 78 years of age, who assisted in translations for the old Cherokee Advocate, nearly 30 years ago, lives in practical retirement near this place, visiting Tahlequah only at long intervals.

Chest Colds

Cold on the chest means congestion with possible serious complications. This congestion in bronchial tubes and air passages must be relieved by bringing fresh blood to the congested parts. The penetrating quality of BAUME BENGUE (pronounced Ben-Gay) stimulates outer-chest circulation, lessening deeper congestion, bringing prompt relief.

If you do not get prompt relief you should consult a physician.

Loan Expert

John M. Wilson.

When the new protected mortgage department of the Morris Plan bank opens Wednesday, February 1, John M. Wilson, well-known local banker and loan expert, will be in charge. Mr. Wilson leaves the Exchange Trust company, where he has been assistant manager of the city loan department, to take up his new duties. Mr. Wilson has been with the Exchange organization since

LEADER'S GRANDSON ILL

Relative of Major Lowrey, Cherokee Official, Seriously Ill.

MENARD, March 7 (Special)—

Andrew J. Lowrey, aged 75, is critically ill at his home on the old Tahlequah trail. Lowrey, who has lived on the same place during practically his lifetime, is the only surviving grandson bearing the family surname of the famous Cherokee leader and official, Maj. George Lowrey, who died early in the fifties of the last century.

Old Major Lowrey served under Andrew Jackson in the war against the Creeks of Alabama in 1814, a fact which is probably responsible for the name, Andrew Jackson Lowrey.
