DID IT EVER HAPPEN

If you have occasion to use a "National Magazine," to use it, when you are in front of the house and toward the door. A wheel is the most complicated thing on the face of the earth. It is over one when he would fall over anything. He knows when he has got over it, either, for it is his legs and his arms, turn and rear up in front of him as he pauses in his progress. He congratulates himself it takes and scoops more skin off his back. He commences to evolve a new himself on fresh places. He ceases to fall over a wheel. It turns completely on its axis and brings up against something. It is the most interesting object there is, but it is more dangerous than a locomotive. It is secure with one unless it holds of its handles and is on something. A wheel is used, without doubt, but at moments it is the great beauty on true dignity.
