

Tentative Table of Contents

State of the PeoplesPART I: State of the Peoples (10 pages)

- Preface: (1 page). By Wilma Mankiller (tentative).
- Introduction: acknowledgments, why this report; future plans (1-2 pages). By Marc Miller and/or David Maybury-Lewis
- Global lead essay: the State of the Peoples. Drawing and expanding on themes in the preface to this proposal and the Indigenous Rights Campaign. (7 pages). By Pam Solo, with collaboration from all Cultural Survival senior staff.

PART II: Case Studies/Indigenous Rights Campaign (80 pages, plus map)

- Visual/graphic essay: successes and failures of 1992. Based on original statistical analysis within CS and drawing on the Peoples Base. (8 pages)
State of the Peoples 1993 will establish a baseline. As Cultural Survival establishes principles and criteria for measuring the state of human rights for indigenous peoples and ethnic minorities, this could evolve in later editions into a rating system or basis for predicting potential human-rights abuses.

By Jason Clay, director of CSE and founder of Cultural Survival Quarterly

- A map/visual representation of the State of the Peoples, highlighting groups facing particular preventable and predictable dangers that CS and others can address. This map will highlight the cases developed later in this section. (large format, 4-color map insert)
- Six to nine major articles, each focused on a single threatened group. By activists and scholars, indigenous and non-indigenous. Signed, scholarly, opinionated articles. Among the major articles will be case studies on groups in the Indigenous Rights Campaign. (8 pages each; 72 pages)
