Dear Ms. Mankiller

I hope this is not too presumptuous of me, but I am hoping to get your autograph on a copy of your new book. I am quite a fan of yours, as is a friend of mine, for whom I bought the book as a gift. I hope you can find the time and that it is not an imposition; it would please both of us.

I listened to National Public Radio the day of your induction into the National Women's Hall of Fame, and I found your speech funny and interesting. I hope one day to have the opportunity to meet you, as unlikely as that may be. Thank you in advance for the autograph.

The wife of one of my co-workers, Janie Dibble, is being kind enough to do this for me. If you would return to book to her, I would really appreciate it.

Sincerely,
