

From An Unidentified Newspaper
Clipping, From F. S. BARDE CLIPPING
FILES, OKLAHOMA HISTORICAL SOCIETY,
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

AGED SEMINOLE GOVERNOR, SUCCESSFUL FARMER,
STILL PREACHES TO THE INDIANS

Ada, Okla.,

Sept. 6.

Governor John F. Brown of the Seminole nation lives in a beautiful home two miles west of the village of Sasakwa. His broad and fertile acres, under fine cultivation, exhibits the splendid business acumen for which he long has been noted. Ripe in years -- having been born seventy years ago -- he is surrounded with a large and interesting family, all of whom are proud of his achievements and devotedly attached to him in these, the declining days of his eventful life.

About a mile east of Governor Brown's home is one of the historic churches of the new state, and perhaps one of the best attended. Its history dates