EDITORIAL ON J. F. BROWN

Ex-Governor Brown, of the Seminole nation, gave expression to an enlightened and sound policy when he said that the end of tribal government was at hand and that the Indian must prepare for the inevitable. "We want," he said, "good white men to come in and buy the Indian's land at a fair and reasonable price and become a neighbor of the red men. We want him to buy 120 acres of land, put it in a high state of cultivation and by his example and co-operation teach his Indian neighbor how to farm and improve his adjoining homestead."
