

that anymore either because there ain't nobody who want to buy them. But they'll buy poppies.

(When you go down to your hospital, did you have any special hospital you go to?)

The veteran's hospital. I don't know what the--in Oklahoma City.

(Oh, you don't go to Muskogee?)

Long time, we went to Muskogee. It was one time I remember we went to Muskogee.

(Did they?)

They want us down there so we went down there.

(Don't some of you in the chapters go to Muskogee?)

No, we don't go. I imagine---

(Some of the other chapters from down around Muskogee, do they go there, or do---?)

Well.

(They all go to Oklahoma City?)

Well, we just all go to Oklahoma City. That one time we went down there, we was supposed to be down there so we had to be down there, but since then, we haven't been back. I imagine we should go down there and visit the hospital between times.

(You don't have any other plans, just raise funds this year, and you don't have a dance this year, do you?)

No. If we could have benefit dance, we could have one, but not regular.

(Armistice Day dance, you could have a dance anytime, I imagine.)

Any time--we got good place to dance, down at the armory. It is big down there. If people would just make their kids mind, that is what always ruins everything. People can't get them halls. I told Jean next time.
