

TWO UNUSUAL INCIDENTS

An old crazy woman there and she got away from the home and they was out trying to find her but I didn't know it. And so it was a rainin' and I was out a horse-back--foolin' around and it was awful dark. And I come to an ole' house, side of the road. And I thought that I'd get down and wait till it slacked up. Sat round in there little bit. Wasn't no porch on the house and I rode up to the door and got down. Standing inside the door there and directly something sittin' up on the door reached down got to feelin' around over my head you know. An' feelin' around, I was scared to death in there. And I got out and got on my horse and left. Got out in the road there a piece and I met some guys and they asked me if I seen anything of this ole' woman. And I told them what I knowed about it, you know up there. I thought--

(Uh-huh)

They guessed that was her but didn't know what it was then. So they went back up there and I went back with them and sure enough it was that ole' woman. She got down by that time on the floor you know. She was just lying stretched out there on the floor. She didn't know nothing. Course she wasn't passed out or nothing. She just laying there.

(Uh-huh)

She'd got out and got all wet and her hair all tangled up and everything you know. So they got her and took her on back. Took her back down where she belong. And they kind of watched her around there a few days and they took her over here to Vinita you know. Kept her over there awhile and she got alright. She went back home. She was doing alright then. (Not clear).

(Well that's good.)

Never got way from them anymore, nothing like that anymore.
