

much as there are now. That was about all. I guess it gave a little news. I don't know whether it even gave the weather over that or not. Now they get it but you miss it sometimes you know. Sometimes get it, sometimes you don't.

(Yeah)

(Yeah like you said a while ago you said it was going to rain.)

Well that's what they said--rain this evening and tonight. May rain tonight yet.

TRAVEL IN EARLY DAYS--FRISCO RAILROAD

(We were talking about cars a while ago. Were there very many cars around then--around this part of the country?)

No-o! Everybody went to town in a wagon and a foot. There's a railroad track over here--lot of people went right down that railroad track. You take these Grasshopper boys you know. Just go right down that track. Now you can't hardly get down it. Them bridges all tore up and everything you know--and grewed up and everything. Don't look like the same place.

(I think they've taken off most of those ties and the rails--haven't they--most of them?)

Yeah.

(Where those old trains used to go?)

There's hardly any of them on there.

(What was the name of that railroad?)

Frisco.

(Frisco Railroad.)

Yeah.

(Now that probably came through when this was Indian territory--
