

feller's name, probably looked like they had a--that old reporter had a write-up about that. I just couldn't tell you how it started. Anyhow Proctor was a law at that time and they just got to shooting one another. Mrs. Hilderbrand's husband was--she run in between the men and just about the time she run inbetween them well Proctor shot her. (Well.)

That's what the trouble started from.

MEMBERS OF FAMILY WHO WERE IN MILITARY SERVICE

There's one down town. It's write-up in the Reporter.

(sentence not clear)

(Well, you say Morris killed a Sixkiller?)

Yeah, he married a Sixkiller.

(Oh, he married one.)

His first wife. And this here feller he married mother.

(Well, William Grisby.)

He married Ellen Grisby first time. That's their son.

(Yeah.)

He was in the service a long time.

(Long time ago. World War I.)

Yeah, before, he was a volunteer.

(Well, yeah, before World War I. Yeah, because he died in 1914.)

Yeah.

(Well, he must have been in the Spanish American War too?)

No, he wasn't hardly old enough.

(Yeah, let's see you served in World War I, didn't you?)

No, I didn't get to go. I was too old in World War II. Now he volunteered.

He was on the coast artillery. Oh he's gone a long time. I guess he served through enlistment, volunteered. Uncle Able was born in 1845.
