

a told us. I think he'd a told us lot of things. "Why didn't you ask him where he went and got it?" (interruption) His sores were alright.

I said, (sentence not clear) First time I ever went to the hospital,

I said, "Long as my folks lived, we didn't know nothing about the doctor." We never did know, we always go get somebody.

(I've been wanting to ask somebody.. Back in those old days, what did the folks use to keep stuff in. They didn't have bottles like we have now, did they?)

No, they didn't!.

PRESERVATION OF FOODS

(And cans and jugs. I just wonder what they kept all their stuff in.)

I don't know either. I've wondered that myself. Another thing they kill a hog or anything they want. I don't care how that time was. If they had one to kill, they'd kill it.

(That's right.)

Look it up, you know. Anymore, you know, people don't know what to do with it. Didn't have ice box--

(That's right, a freezer.)

Yeah, freezer, something. They just cook it up, you know, and let it set in that grease, you know. And anymore when you go to the hospital, they don't see no grease, no (word not clear) nothing. They put you on a diet. (sentence not clear). You have to obey or not go back home.

(That's right. No, you marvel at how they got by. They all were healthy.)

And they had, I can remember, you know, there used to be lot of hogs and they had lot of meat in the wintertime and they eat all the wanted, not just a piece around. Well, it was just a platter full. They ate and things like that just plentiful then, you know.

(Yeah.)
