

a rustic look. Old used brick and a cork tan roof and light brown trim or a white trim.

(Participant, man:) We'll take it or leave it.

Mr. Tompkins. Beautiful looking house on the outside.

(Participant, man:) Actually I think we're very extreme fortunate to get these bricks if you can get it.

(Participant, lady makes comment.)

Mr. Clement: But we wouldn't charge you, but that's the normal going price. Ten dollars over price we pay. Sentence not clear (Participant, lady:) As I suggested before when I was talking to Mr. Tompkins about this. I said, we will call a special meeting. In fact they're on recess now due to the meeting we have here. We gonna call a special meeting of the participants, and then we're going to select our labor and pick the people out as to their skill. And what they can do.

Mr. Clement: In that same meeting if you could get all these decisions made.

(Participant, lady:) Well that's what I mean.

Mr. Clement: (not clear) The progress of this conference could wait because if it's got to wait thirty days on brick or something. Uh..we..we we sign this letter of intent we sign this contract sale. As long as everything goes and we don't delay, he's got no cause to come back at us for more money. So because two or three participants have decided to change their minds, and just won't hear of it any other way, and we delay him a couple of weeks why then he can come with a deal and collect because we have delayed. (laughter) That's right. In other words, you have a definite claim because we have interfered with a man's plan of operation. But if at some time before we get started. He's got all this information, it's all on his back. We won't keep (not clear) And uh we want to be able to sit back and say we've done it, Mr. Tompkins, how come isn't the house ready? See? That's the prime philosophy. And that's the way he wants it, he wants full control of it. Because then he can blow and go.
