

Or whether they was just bunched up and drove 'em out or something. I don't know.

(She ever tell you any of the details?)

Yeah, she's told me that there was several of them died on the way. Said, she made it here.

(Did they have enough to eat and stuff like that?)

Yeah. Yeah, she said they had enough to eat. 'Cause them white people kept 'em up see.

(Uh-huh)

Now they're going to fight (T.V.) (The television is on and they are watching between programs?)

(Tape skip)

(--Sugar Mountain, Hooley?)

You know, you go to Tahlequah and you go to--you go to Tenkiller--go towards Tenkiller and you go down there to--I don't know what they call that little branch down there--you cross it then it's way upon a hill. It's about 25 miles from Tahlequah.

(But down towards Lake Tenkiller?)

Yeah, you go across that way.

(She kept telling us that's where they used to live on Sugar Mountain.)

That's where they used to live, back south of there. Levi Bullet and them still live up there. Them there--you know that where I used to work for, he married one of them girls. Birdie. Oh, what's his name? Clarence.

He runs the filling station over there at Sequoyah. Sequoyah School.

(Well, where were you born now? Right on down from here?)

Across the branch.

(Cross the branch over here. You went to school down here at Shady Grove.

Up to the 8th grade?)
