

see, I wasn't around very much. Didn't go to around very much. And then, I just really don't know much about that now. To tell you the truth, I might say something that wouldn't even right. I'd just rather not talk about it cause I really don't know.

(Do you know when he was chief?)

No, I don't know. No, I don't. That was my grandfather, you know. I really don't know much about my tribe at all. Now Clarence ought to know all that. He's got the history, the legend of the tribe.

(How about of the Quapaws? Know any of their older Chiefs?)

Yeah, Tallchief, I knew him.

(You knew him?)

Uh-hum. Yeah. I cooked many a meal for him. Chief Bert Griffin's. Alex Beaver was the second chief. Charlie Quapaw Blackhawk, he was a chief.

Third voice: Frank Valyear, he was an interpretor, wasn't he?

Man: Yes. And this other Alfonse Valyear--

Yes. That's what, I couldn't--I was trying to think what his first name was.

Man: I tell you another one, Samuel Valyear.

Yeah. I believe Alphonse was. I never got to meet Samuel, and (not clear) knew him. I guess about all I know.

Man: He wasn't a chief.

(End of Interview)