

So we really grateful to the buffalo.

(You compare it with the New Mexico Indians?)

The New Mexico Indians is something like that. They, their sacred thing is the spider. They tell everybody don't ever kill a spider. They won't kill a spider because they taught them how to weave their rugs.

(Do you have any special or favorite story that your Uncle told you?)

(Not clear)

(About Sainday?)

(Irrelevant conversation.)

(Do you have any that are...)

(Irrelevant conversation.)

SAINDAY STORY

About Sainday broke his leg and ate it.

(What? I don't think I've heard that from anyone.)

(Not clear)

(I don't think I've heard anybody mention that one.)

This old, some of these are, fairy tale, Indian fairy tale. Sainday, he's the main character. He's known as the teaser or cheater or I don't know how to explain it. He tried to outdo everybody. One day he was hungry and there was nothing for him to eat. So he decided he'll climb a tree and to break his leg. He said, "I'm pretty hungry." "And I can't find anything to eat." So he climbed a tree and broke his leg. And he broke his leg. He was suffering but he ate his own leg. And uh, he said, "Boy, that tasted good." "Now I'm going to break my arm. I didn't get enough." So he goes up in the tree again and jump off, broke his arm. And he ate his two arms and he has to cross a river to get back to his camp, camping grounds. And