

them. I never seen in our country--the Cheyenne-Arapaho people--we don't make fun of our flag. We honor our flag. We honor it. In this country of ours over here I tell my young men--I tell them that. I always go up and shake hands with them and then I talk to them. Today we're living in a turmoil now. Just like we're in a turmoil. I read, and sometimes I can't keep up. I read. But I read that in them universities they're causing riots--colored people are causing riots. They don't care for law and order. They don't care for that. Student, higher learning. They ought to know them things. I hear that they burn draft cards. They tromp on our flag. I hear that. I read that. I never seen that happen. I never seen it myself. It happen other night in demonstrations. I never see that myself. I never did see it yet. But I read that. I don't know what may happen--I don't know. We got ways here with our Indian people over their trouble spots. We talk about these eagle also. Back over there, this eagle. I talk to my people about this bird. He's the number one bird in this country. You people, you got that for your emblem. Before the President of the United States talks, I notice that he's got that eagle in back of him. On many occasions I see that. They even got it down on that coin--this eagle. What I'm going to tell--my own opinion--what I tell my people, what I tell you--we got Indian boys over there. They know that that flag--and officers that are in command that wear them eagles. They wear them. As far as the Indian living in here, we got lots of different tribes of Indians, I said, in the state of Oklahoma. We have Kiowas, Comanches, Wichitas, Caddoes, Shawnees, Yuchis, Cherokees, Choctaws, Poncas, Tonkawas. We got lots of tribes here. Never did hear of these Indian boys, I said, burning his draft card. What we're living in here--as long as we comply with law and order--as long as we comply we can get along with it. I tell my people that. I believe in that. Like what I told you this morning. We believe in those things. I believe in that. This here--this university--it would be a sin if our students would burn--take down the American flag and make fun of it. Causing riots. Get out of the way. I said I live in the state of
