

And we got to do that, you know. We could say the cee-oo, (Laughter.)

(Now where'd you all move from when you came to Hulbert?)

Porter.

(Porter?)

Uh-huh. It's west of here. It's not on the highline. It's--the highway used to go through there. And the first year that I was married we lived at Porter.

(Well, how old are you now, Granny?)

Huh?

(How old are you now?)

I'm going on eight-- Now can you guess?

(That must be seventy-nine going on eighty. Is that right?)

Oh, no! (Laughter.)

(I thought that was little bit old for you.)

I was seventy-six, seventy-seven this last year and I'm going on eight, see.

(Oh, I see.)

Eight, eight.

(You're going on seventy-eight. Well now, that has been about sixty years ago, hasn't it?)

Yeah. Oh, yeah it has.

(Well, what were times like back then?)

FAMILY - EMPLOYMENT

Well, it was just hard times. And when I was just small--when I begin to realize, why, it just hard time, that's all. And Papa get out and he'd work--come to work, but he didn't get nothing much for it. But, you know, we just had beans and we had potatoes in the garden. And always had a milk cow. We just always got along just fine.
