

(Did you raise your own stuff in the summer and put it away for the winter?)

Yes. And she always canned lots of stuff. And I did for several years after we lived up here. Why, we'd raise stuff and I'd can it. You know, it's odd now to think about not canning them things. But I have canned different times and I'd kept it as much as six years. And I've got some cans in there now I don't know how old they are. And I'd just throw them out, you know. There's no use in keeping them. Because sometimes I have company but not very often. Then I had company this year from Kentucky, one of my husband's brother and his wife.

(Oh, from Kentucky. I was born and raised in Kentucky.)

Oh.

(What part of Kentucky are they from?)

Well, it's (words not clear). What is it?

(Harrisburg?)

No.

(Hazard?)

Yeah, I believe it was Hazard.

(Do they live up in the mountains?)

I don't know but they worked in the tobacco.

(Yeah, uh-huh.)

And they have fields of tobacco all the time, and they work out there. I know she was talking to me; she taken some of those red flowers that's over there home with her. Now just family they were always, and we were just like a real family all of them together. And when we were married for several years, you know the--Mr. and Mrs. Girdner--why they just--I was just the same as one of their children when I married in the family. Well, (inaudible) and him, why she was the same. And we were just like a big
