

And it was about thirty miles on north from there. This place it was in Arkansas, 'cross the line.

(So then, after Arkansas--you lived there for how long?)

We just went on a visit to Arkansas.

(Oh, I see.)

Uh-huh. He rented a place out and then we had another place, you know these little houses right here out this way on--they're little old houses.

(Yeah, Uh-huh.)

VACATION BY WAGON

And we stored our stuff in one of them places.

(Oh I see.)

And we was gone all summer long. And we went and saw Grandpa, stayed there two weeks. And Papa said, "Well, let's just fix up the wagon--". Before we left here, he fixed up over-debts. You know what over-debts on a wagon is?

(No, what is it?)

It's a board so wide here and it fits against, you know, up here on the side that way, comes out. And then it has another board up here. And then it has another board up here. And then it has places for--what you call it?

(Your luggage?)

No, huh-uh. No, it makes it ride as a bed when you put those over-debts on this wagon.

(Oh-h.)

It makes it as wide as an ordinary bed. And he fixed this in the back of it, you knew. And under the back then, why he fixed the end gate to drop down and has a little safe in there for groceries and dishes. Hid under the bed. Well then, that goes back a long way. And then in the bottom of it--on at the end of the bed there--why where you come in on the side of the wagon, why there was our bed.
