

He built that. And then it went on another year or two, this little house down here on the corner that comes by, got three rooms right along there right down there.

(Yeah. Uh-huh.)

(Sentence not clear.) Let's see if I can think of her name--Peggy, I believe it's Peggy (inaudible) lives there. Indian lady. You know her, I don't.

(Peggy Soap?)

I think (words not clear). I ain't for sure. I don't know it is. I know whole mess of them, but I get the names mixed up. (Laughter.) And I want to be sure who she is now. But anyhow, he come back and that place then he moved his things there. And then there's another house already there. Five or four room house just out from there. And then he built this one then.

(You didn't have any restaurant or anything then, did you?)

Huh-uh. No, he sold the restaurant out in about a year after. And he moved the house here and then we went up there to Muskogee; and then we came back. He wanted to go to Arkansas and see his father. And then his father had a little extra money, and then he wanted him to take it and buy this place on the corner there. So he did. And there's where we were going to build a house and he just got it. It isn't like it was then; it had four rooms. We had three this way and then there's a room out here. And they took that off.

(Oh-h. Uh-huh.)

WEDDING - MOVE TO PORTER

And they had four rooms. We lived there one winter the best I remember. And well, I don't remember, it was a year or two right along there. And then anyway we moved back, I was twenty-one in May; and in December, why,
