

(Yes, ma'am.)

Well, one road goes down south. Bill Thompson was there. He retired.

He just died not long ago.

(Yeah. Bill Thompson was quite a picture there at Cleora.)

Yes.

(Post office and store there.)

Yes.

(They used to have a railroad go through there.)

Oh yeah, there's a railroad went through there. Yes, and before they built the dam. Oh, they had a nice little town there. They had Churches.

(Yeah.)

Methodist Church and I think they had a Baptist Church. I know they had a Methodist Church. And uh--there was a school they had.

(Yeah, they had a nice school there.)

Uh-huh. My children, after we moved over here went to school at Cleora.

Had a school bus running. It still runs from here to Cleora. Down here to Cleora School District. (Sentence not clear.)

DOES NOT APPRECIATE THE INDIAN CULTURE CENTER

(No, I've never heard of anything like that either. No, that Indian culture center, just is not representative of the Cherokees from what the people have told me.)

Well, that's what everybody tells me. Course, I never went out there because I couldn't see anyway. I didn't think it was worthwhile for me to go.

(Yeah.)

And my grandmother came over from Georgia, Trail of Tears.

(Well.)

She was about twelve years old.

(Hum. What was your grandmother's name?)

Annie Snell.
