

I know where that is.

(Do you know any of those people that were buried there?)

Well.

(Swimmer now the first one.)

Yeah.

(That's all the name he had. Was Civil War Veteran.)

I think he's got some grown boys, too, grown girls.

(Yeah.)

He's raised. I'm not too well acquainted back up in there. About as far as Spavinaw is about all the further I've been. Knew some people back there, but they're all gone the ones I was well acquainted.

(Yeah)

But I knew Swimmer down there at--over by Grove there.

(Yeah)

I knew him and old Buzzard they called him too.

(Yeah)

I guess, I think he's still living, I don't know. I haven't heard. He was a preacher, but I guess if he's still living, I guess, he must be a preacher yet. He preaches both languages, Cherokee and English.

(The old time preacher, was it Jim Sixkiller?)

Jim Sixkiller, yeah.

(He was a preacher.)

Yeah, he was. Yeah, he was a good old man, too.

(tape skip)

He talk about something, I had to stop there to listen to him.

(That's right. Yeah; you could sure learn a lot from the old timers. Because they've all ready lived and they know what its like.)
