

(What he, who was it they used to clean out the toilets. Who was it?)

Oh, that was him. When we left Peggs we started to, we got in with some folks and we was going to go to Joplin. Well' you wasn't born then, 'course Nobbie was little. And we got to, oh where do they have that big celebration ever year. They didn't have this year.

(Was it at Dewey?)

No, up in Kansas.

(Oh it's.)

Up close to Carthridge, Missouri. Somewhere up in there.

(Horton?)

No.

(Mayetta?)

No.

(What kind of celebration is it? Is it Medicine Lodge?)

Old-timers Celebration in Kansas.

(Medicine Lodge.)

No--up there close to Joplin.

(Oh. I don't know.)

But anyhow we stopped there and we didn't have a bite to eat, nothing for the horses and we had an old shot-gun. And your dad took it up and pawned it for two dollars. And uh--we got a lot of--we got feed for the horses. Something for us out of that two dollars. Now you couldn't have bought a pound of bacon for it. So he got a job, him and the man cleaning out toilets. They worked for some man that had a septic or not a septic tank but he had a wagon to do that with. And he they clean out old toilets around over town. We got enough money to go on.

(Did you go on to Joplin?)
