

(Your grandmother and mother.)

They drove her mother and grandmother, too.

(Oh, her mother and her grandma were on the Trail of Tears?)

Brother, he died.

(Oh, he died on the trail?)

They were trying to shoot 'em.

(How come?)

They wanted 'em to get out of there, where they at.

(Oh, I see what you mean. They wanted--the soldiers drove them.

And if they wouldn't leave, they'd shoot them.)

Just like they're fighting now. The Japs--the killing American man does. That's what the law--nobody didn't--they're going to have to pass around papers over there, sign up. I ain't going to do it.

Oh! What county we are, she said.

(Adair county I believe--See those people that are doing that, they have an office right by my trailer.)

And I know them. I know Miss Proctor, Madeline, all of them.

That's the only one that have to use it, said around here.

(They're the only ones that--)

I've never seen 'em. What did they look like?

(Well, they live here colse, don't they, Kenwood?)

Kenwood. Cherokee. She says she's cousin.

(Lucille, I like her.)

I don't know, I never have seen her.

(She's a nice woman. She spoke--she testified when Senator Robert Kennedy was down here for Indian Education and she spoke in Cherokee.)

(Much conversation in Cherokee.)

(Yeah, that's it.)

She said she didn't want no one showing pictures of her grandma.

(If you don't want that drama to be shown, then they want you to sign
